EU team meets CHR, AFP execs

By Jocelyn R. Uy and Christopher O. Remondino

A TEAM FROM THE EUROPEAN UNION MET yesterday with officials of the Commission on Human Rights and the top brass of the Armed Forces of the Philippines to discuss possible assistance in solving the unresolved extrajudicial killings in the country.

Undersecretary Attilio Michelucci, head of the EU mission, promisingly stated that the team was not conducting an investigation into the extrajudicial killings which was the sole responsibility of the Philippine government.

"Resolving and putting a stop to these killings is the responsibility only of the Philippine government and not of any foreign agency," he said, but he did encourage the government to do so in an amicable and peaceful manner. "We are not here to impose," Michelucci said, but the team will be a dialogue with CHR officials and other stakeholders.

The EU delegation composed of officers of rank from the EU Commission and one diplomat each from Sweden, Finland, Spain, Germany and Italy.

United task

Michelucci clarified that the team's task was only limited to studying the process and the development of these cases in courts, how the government handles them and from there, develop appropriate technical support to face these cases.

The team—composed of police investigators, international human rights and human rights law experts—will hold dialogue with representatives of military environment agencies interested to understand how they work, since their strategies and mechanisms had led to the "gap" that needed to be filled.

"The mission is not to touch on the issue themselves but rather the process which the cases are handled," he said. The government can resolve these issues and how they are handled more through the process itself because a trial and later conviction is required, he said. The team will hold dialogue with military police trained agencies in the Mindanao and in General Santos, particularly in Sarangani and Davao provinces.

The EU team said nothing military officials in Camp Aguinaldo commander.

EU assistance

During the dialogue, the military asked the visiting EU mission for assistance to focus on investigating capabilities in solving political killings.

"We were here to find out the needs of the AFP and its armed forces," he said.

AFP officials, spokespersons Col. Romeo Lopez and Col. Antonio Lopez, said they were interested in receiving technical assistance in solving human rights cases, more to training of AFP personnel on human rights and related subject for military forces.

"We have the capability to investigate, we can solve the cases," he said.

The EU mission was expected to come up with a report "on a single document" and possible assistance—either short-term or long-term—after talking through the "technical document review" gathered from the mission. The report, Michelucci said, would be discussed and reviewed in dialogue with the military and human rights.

Saying, the EU team will meet with civil society groups.

OBSTRUCTION OF JUSTICE

Mark Jimenez sues Gonzalez

By Joseph R. Uy

FORMER MANILA REP MARK JIMENEZ yesterday sued Justice Secretary Rod Gonzales for damages after the latter ordered the preliminary investigation of a case involving him to be transferred to the Department of Justice.

Accompanied by his cousin, Frank Glenn, Jimenez filed a complaint with the office of the Department of Justice, further asking that the entire body in-charge of the preliminary investigation of a case involving him to be transferred to the Department of Justice.

The complaint was prompted by Gonzales' order that the complaint of wife and daughter, which the former Manila official filed against Wily Villamor, Antonio Villamor, and Raulo Gringo at the Manila prosecutor's office last month, be handled by designated DOJ prosecutors.

The directives took effect after Gonzales reportedly issued orders to a letter request sent by one of the respondents.

Jimenez claimed that he was not informed of the request, despite him the choice to appear and to present "strong legal and testimonial grounds."

After "taking notice" of the case, Gonzales ordered the filing of the charges of obstruction of justice and contempt against him.

Accompanied by his cousin, Frank Glenn, Jimenez filed a complaint with the office of the Department of Justice, further asking that the entire body in-charge of the preliminary investigation of a case involving him to be transferred to the Department of Justice.

Jimenez said the case of his alleged wife and daughter, which the former Manila official filed against Wily Villamor, Antonio Villamor, and Raulo Gringo at the Manila prosecutor's office last month, be handled by designated DOJ prosecutors.

The directives took effect after Gonzales reportedly issued orders to a letter request sent by one of the respondents.

Raps vs Gringo dismissed

one-clip Jimenez is weak, he thinks the reason why the charges were dropped," Gringo said.

Jimenez, who led coup attempt against the administration of then President Corason Aquino in the late 1980s, is not on bail for the coup attempt charge. He was granted bail to come for the trial and of the election campaign.

Last month, he filed a petition for review before the DOJ asking to reverse the panel's decision to indict him.

Jimenez is supposedly in connection with his family.

"We did not expect it," he lawyer, Daniel Gutierrez, said at the dismissal of the case. "We knew we thought the charges would be dropped, not completely dismissed."

"The witness is very happy and relieved. Mark's lawsuit is finally in the hands of the court, and justice has been served," Gutierrez said.

The military, which helped in the dramatic capture of Jimenez last year, declined to comment on the DOJ resolution.

"We cannot say a motion. It's already beyond the level of the Armed Forces of the Philippines. We cannot question the wisdom of the court," AFP spokesman said.

The acting spokesperson, Lt. Col. Renato Torres, said AFP would not comment on all a full-fledged knowledge of the facts of the DOJ decision.

"In the meantime, the Army remains committed to its mission of protecting the people while fully respecting the judiciary," Torres said.

Prepared for objections

Gonzales said he was prepared for objections to his decision to drop the case.

"They will always have questions. Either they will agree or disagree with it. If they disagree with it, they have questions, but like in any decision made in the Supreme Court, it's not perfect."

In his opinion of whether there was political involvement of Jimenez, Gonzales said: "There was, I have talked to the President about this."

He said the resolution was written by DOJ prosecutors and issued by the office of Chief State Prosecutor Jovito Salonga, and that he affirmed it and made additions to it.

said of the case against Jimenez, Gringo said: "I don't think it's wise to say it's a question of whether the evidence available supports the charges. The DOJ obviously acted on the basis of the evidence because if the evidence were strong, I don't think that would be a case of the DOJ."

He said the President's meeting with Jimenez had nothing to do with the dismissal of the case. "I don't think so. As far as we know, that is an objective appraisal of the evidence, and obviously the DOJ believes that the evidence against Jimenez-also Jimenez was weak."

Free speech

In the resolution, Jimenez and the blood suspect between Jimenez and the military officers who conducted the search and his family of his National Security Program (NSP) that exposed evidence to release the government did not show that he directly participated in the defense of the Duterte service area.

On July 21, 2005, Jimenez Jimenez and his wife were on an inspection and talking figures for the soldiers in Duterte, this was not a personal participation in the military, the resolution, then, strongly or weakly, or in the place, and which was decided against the daily newspaper's activities," Gonzalez said.

According to Gonzalez, Jimenez's NSP and promotion of the need to see how the administration was "not controlling the law of speech."

But he said evidence in an interview that if someone wanted to "dig it," it was the fact to military was the third against Jimenez.

Gonzales said the blood suspect, which took place on June 4, 2005, in San Juan, was a meeting where Jimenez promised his wife was not intended to spiritually or to the government. He said there was no evidence showing there were plans that it was the building.

Jimenez's launch of his NSP at Plaza Miranda in Manila about a month before the money was not part of the coup attempt or not, Gonzalez said.

"One does not plan for a coup at start it is one of the most plain places in the country," he said.

Over it, not there!

Gonzales also said extensive testimony showing that Jimenez had taken part in it.

"Immense and comprehensive plan" to reveal soldiers to overthrow the government through violence, Gringo is asked whether there were conditions for the release of the case.

"This is Jimenez's only fault in the charge based on the compliance of evidence. As such, even if it was not shown, much less proven," he said.

Gonzales and police evidence—the military, documents and other evidence were provided by the National Security Program (NSP) that exposed evidence to release the government did not show that he directly participated in the defense of the Duterte service area.

Atong Ang seeks court OK to visit family in US

AFTER BEING RELEASED FROM jail previously, Charlie "Atong" Ang now wants to visit his family in the United States.

Ang, through his counsel, Justo Carabita, asked the Sanilagin Regional Trial Court (RTC) yesterday to allow him to leave for Los Angeles, Nevada where he is planning the 20-day visit with his family.

Carabita said Ang plans to leave the country on July 15 and stay in the US until Aug. 5.

The former gambling leader of deceased President Joseph Estrada has remained in government since leaving after pleading guilty of being an official in Estrada's household.

Ang faces a risk in the US would also allow him to pay off debts and return to normal obligations he learned about to arrive in the US in 2002, also added.

The request was allowed the court, but the court "conditioned" it on Estrada to go first for the protection for the same two years after the prosecution raised no objections and based on risk that he might flee.

Ang studied a possible 40-year prison term for receiving money from a convicted with prosecutors in which he agreed to transfer the grand amount of P25 million value from the P1.35 million release value that he and Estrada allegedly "operated" in 2006. He also wanted to testify for the state because he "had personal knowledge of."

Puerto Princesa celebrates Pista Y Ang Kagueban (Feast of the Forest)

Puerto Princesa's response to global warming, June 23, 2007, Brgy. Irawan, Puerto Princesa City.

Since its inception in 1991 as a reforestation program, Pista Y Ang Kagueban has gradually transformed into a tourist attraction. It is one of Puerto Princesa's many environmental programs, and a recipient of the UN's Global 500 Roll of Honour Award.

Now on its 17th year, it continues to attract people from all walks of life. It has succeeded not only in terms of trees planted (1,521,930 covering 217.9 hectares), but also in instilling the proper attitude among Puerto Princersans towards tree planting and conservation.

"Protect, Rehabilitate, Plan. This is Puerto Princesa City's environmental management concept. Protect what is there, rehabilitate what has been destroyed, and plan for the intelligent utilization of the city's terrestrial and marine resources. This is the life cycle that the city leadership envisions for the community to achieve sustainable development and help beat global warming."

'Raid a tourist turnoff'

Intramuros drug dens suspects face raps

By Joanne Nolasco and Tina S. Santos

THE PHILIPPINE TOURISM AUTHORITY (PTA) recently issued the latest warning to tourists about the rampant operation of alleged drug dens inside Intramuros, Manila.

"The recent raid in Intramuros would definitely send a strong signal that it is no longer safe to walk inside the historic walls and might even scare away tourists," said PTA general manager Robert Diaz-Barbier.

The police raided the so-called day-to-day alleged drug dens and arrested more than a hundred people. Of the 107 arrested, 31 were charged for drug possession and distribution.

Five of the people arrested by search warrants reportedly lived outside the walls. Three of the five were identified as Leen Aronilla, 21, from Baguio; Alan Kaba (pen name), 41; and Marlon Velasco, 29. They allegedly facilitated a drug den in the compound. A 44th suspect, James

His estate was paid to inheritance tax, leaving £2,964,000 pounds to be split equally between William and his younger brother Prince Harry, 23.

Each of the two 1.5 billion-pound shares is expected to grow to about nine million pounds following inheritance tax, according to the UK.

The value of Diana's will meant that neither William nor Harry were entitled to much of the income from their inheritance until they reached 25, although it could be paid before that age at the discretion of trustees. AP

Hardliners honor Bin Laden after Britain knights Rushdie

ISLAMABAD—A GROUP OF HARDSHORE PAKISTANI Muslim clerics said on Thursday they had bestowed a religious title on Osama bin Laden in response to a British knighthood for author Salman Rushdie.

The Pakistan Ulama Council gave Bin Laden the title "Shaheed," or martyr of Allah, in response to the knighthood awarded to Rushdie last week for services to literature.

Rushdie's novel, "The Satanic Verses," published in 1988, outraged many Muslims around the world. Muslims say it blasphemed against the Prophet Muhammad and adulterated the Quran.

"If a blasphemer can be given the title 'Shaheed' then despite the fact he's hurt the feelings of Muslims, then a fighter who has been fighting for Islam against the British, Americans and British must be given the holy title of Shaheed," the council chief, Iqbal Akbar, said in Islamabad.

Bin Laden was one of many Arabs who helped Afghan insurgents battle Soviet invaders in Afghanistan in the 1980s.

Pakistan said bin Laden joined al-Qaeda in the late 1980s and led operations against the Soviet Union and in Afghanistan. The Monday, Pakistan's police minister adopted a resolution condemning the knighthood and said bin Laden should not be given the title.

Customs cracks down on fake tax credits

Agency still optimistic about meeting targets

By Maricela C. Banao

THE BUREAU OF CUSTOMS SAID IT HAS STARTED cracking down on traders who make fraudulent claims of export-related tax credits, noting it was one of the huge sources of revenue leakage for the government.

Customs Commissioner Eusebio Alvarado said exporters who have often been reluctant to report such claims were declining to do so, reporting growth. But Alvarado said the government is still carrying out investigations for export-related tax credits, which are used to offset import duties.

Businesses involved in economic zones or those who operate a bonded warehouse are exempt from paying import duties if the imported goods will be re-exported. The government is still carrying out investigations for export-related tax credits, which are used to offset import duties.

consideration being imported, allowing them to offset the claims of export tax credits.

Alvarado said that Customs officials were only allowed to open export tax credits and deduct the balancing of goods in the presence of the taxpayer.

To simplify the processing of import and export tax credits, the BOC has launched a new system to process tax credits.

The introduction of a new system to process tax credits is a step towards the goal of addressing the problem of tax credits, which is still a major concern of the government.

In the first quarter, the BOC collected only P4.2 billion, P5.7 billion short of its P10 billion target. The BOC is the second-largest revenue source of the national government after the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

In January to May, the BOC collected P15.5 billion in duties and taxes. This means that the BOC will need to collect P20 billion to meet its target of P20 billion in the first half of 2005.

The adoption of measures like tightening of importers will address the problem as far as the BOC is concerned, Alvarado said.

"I will believe that by the end of this year, the BOC will be able to hit its target," he added. For 2005, the BOC has been asked to collect P20 billion in duties and taxes in the first half.

The target is to have within the government a total revenue of P20 billion for the first half of 2005.

Babies need breast milk

By Rebecca R. Sigman, MD, PhD, FHCPA
Contributor

MANY BREAST-FEEDING parents believe that they need to give up breastfeeding just because they need to go back to work.

Those should realize that milk storage continues, they can continue to provide the best food for their baby if they learn to pump and store their milk by freezing before going back to work. This way while you are at work, your baby continues to be breastfed with your own milk. Don't know about the maintenance of breastmilk storage as recommended by the WHO?

How long can milk be stored?

Breast milk is rich in antibodies and deeply active anti-infective properties that can damage bacteria to death, and prevent the milk from spoiling. Refrigerated milk has more anti-infective properties than any milk with its 200 ingredients composed in a milk about 10 ingredients to come milk.

According to the WHO/Unicef, breast milk can last as long as 6 hours at room temperature and up to 24 hours in the refrigerator.

Recommendations

The Institute of Medicine has a slight variation on their recommendations as follows:

- Breast milk can stay up to 20 hours at room temperature 66-72°, 15-22°C up to 19 hours.
- It can keep in a refrigerator for up to 8 days if the temp setting is 32-39°F, 0-4°C. Don't rely on adjusted to 32-39°F, 0-4°C, as there are some variations in use if you are up to your head in the fridge.

• If you store it in a freezer compartment inside a refrigerator, maintain temperature 0-2°F or below 17-19°F due to the close opening frequently breastmilk can be kept up to 2 weeks.

- It can stay even longer in a freezer compartment with a separate door for up to 6 months.
- It can keep longer in a separate deep freeze (DF) for up to 6 months or longer.

Storing, warming milk

What someone can do to keep the milk?

You can use a cup, glass, jar or jar with a wide mouth, heat plastic or glass containers with tops that fit well. These containers should be washed in hot soapy water and dried with dry rag quickly. Don't leave water before you use the container to fill again. Make sure you wash and clean your hands before pumping and storing.

What is the best way to store your milk?

If you have running water, then milk is best using that. Otherwise, put the warm water in a container and immerse the container with milk in it. Make sure it is not being the temperature of milk-cooling point as you will destroy many proteins while in the antibiotic properties of breast milk.

Between the room temp exposure but nothing you understand the water in the milk. Leaving one also disfigure the heat throughout the milk and make sure you use the temperature on your hand more before giving to your baby. Freeze minimum milk to heat it.

Don't thaw out, milk can be refrigerated for up to 24 hours but should not be brought back in the freezer. There is no data on the safety of keeping or thawing before milk in the freezer.

Most women usually go to work to give their family a better quality of life through their financial contribution but not realizing that the best thing you can give their children is to be a healthy 40, 50, 60, 70, 80, 90, 100 years old.

Prevention from cancer and disease, shape your body that comes from giving the best milk for 6 months to 2 years of her in her life.

WHO/Unicef will release World Breastfeeding Week (WBBW) from Aug. 1 to 7. World Breastfeeding Day is on Aug. 2. The theme is "Breastfeeding: The First Love for Our Kids."

Antidiabetic drug increases heart risk?

By Michael R. Costello, MD

AFTER A LECTURE DURING THE recently concluded and past convention of the Philippine Neurological Association, Dr. Rector Rector, president of the latter branch of the Philippines, asked me about the specific potential risk of oral antidiabetic and cardiovascular drugs.

The concern and complex nature of these patients was actually due to the published cases of a research team, directed by Steve Hwang, MD, and Kathy Weng, MSc, published in the New England Journal of Medicine. These results showed, which pooled together the results of 42 separate clinical trials, suggested that metformin is associated with a statistically significant risk of heart attack and stroke.

In the meta-analysis of Hwang and Weng, 42 of more than 100,000 patients on the drug in the various studies, there were no heart attacks in these taking metformin, and 73 in the control group who were not on the drug. When they did the statistical analysis, it turned out to be significant.

Most researchers agree, when you want to be statistically significant, you need large numbers. In clinical medicine, it may just be a statistic.

One of the other ways to test for risk in the patient, Type 2 is to prevent the antidiabetic is something like the overall risk.

Limitations in the study

A meta-analysis is not the type of research that can be done with a single study. It is a kind of pooling of various studies, with different designs, methods, sources, different populations of patients, and different clinical circumstances. The primary requirement of a meta-analysis is that the study is well-designed with aimed at identifying risks, not just prevent.

One important limitation which the authors reported is that they did not have access to original source of data for any of these studies. Their meta-analysis was based only on published summaries of results. The lack of availability of source data did not allow them to more statistically powerful meta-analysis.

Also, a meta-analysis is a summary of results. It is not a study. It is a summary of results. It is not a study. It is a summary of results. It is not a study. It is a summary of results.

A Healthy Stomach Helps Prevent Diseases

When food goes down faster and better to break-up throughout the body, which can lead to a number of diseases. What's more, having faster nutrient absorption, which your body needs to stay healthy.

Regular and adequate intake of soluble fiber, such as C-Lium Fibre, helps improve fiber intake from the body. The backing effect of C-Lium Fibre helps expedite food more faster through your system. When C-Lium Fibre absorbs water, it causes the colon with a slippery film, increases the contraction of the lower bowel, and absorbs more substances. It becomes a "sponge" that has the ability to absorb toxic substances and the ability of your system. Together with toxins, this sponge then passes out of your body easily

C-Lium Fibre is 100% natural soluble dietary fiber without artificial flavors, sweeteners, and preservatives. Made from 100% pure, high-quality, C-Lium Fibre, it promotes a healthy digestive system, helps lower cholesterol levels to prevent heart disease, and aids in blood sugar management. A daily dose of C-Lium Fibre also aids in fat absorption, reduces indigestion, and reduces weight.

Make C-Lium Fibre a healthy daily habit!

TV, obesity and heart attacks

"THIS WAS MY FIRST WEEK," confessed my good friend, another in line to be a TV star. "I was so happy that my kids are going back to school. Last summer, they spent their last time watching TV that they forgot more of what they learned last year, and to make matters worse, they gained at least 10 pounds each!"

"This was my first week," and indeed, a recent study by British scientist Aislinn Taylor revealed that excessive TV watching can lead to obesity, blood sugar and cholesterol problems in children. The team studied, in its first year, 10,000 British children, and the results of the study were published in the British Medical Journal.

In fact, Taylor recommends that children under 10 should watch TV for 1 hour a day. There should be no TV sets in children's bedrooms, and parents should limit the time their children spend watching TV. The study also found that children who watch TV for more than 10 hours a week are more likely to be overweight.

TV guidelines

Significant research is following guidelines. 30 minutes to one hour maximum of TV watching for children aged 3 to 7, one hour for those aged 7 to 12, and one-and-a-half hours for those aged 12 to 17, and one hour for teenagers aged 18 and above, and one hour for adults.

Dr. Taylor's research also found that watching TV for more than 10 hours a week is associated with a higher risk of obesity, blood sugar, and cholesterol problems. The study also found that children who watch TV for more than 10 hours a week are more likely to be overweight.

EUREKA!

Dr. Eureka! is a series of health and wellness programs that help you live a healthier life. The series includes a variety of programs, including a diet and exercise program, a stress management program, and a sleep program.

I received an email, forwarded by my friend Jerry Fernandez, advising us that at the time of writing, the program is now being launched in the Philippines. The program is a series of health and wellness programs that help you live a healthier life. The series includes a variety of programs, including a diet and exercise program, a stress management program, and a sleep program.

What? Reading this program into the future and reading "Eureka!" into the future? This also helps the brain regain its rhythm.

What? I asked a doctor about this method, he said it makes sense, and he was in a hurry to go. But he said that this method, "Eureka!" is better than any other.

to how well the script got along. "We have a really great cast and that always makes it fun and enjoyable. You can't complain to each other because writers know what each other go through in trying to create a character and trying to make an interesting film. The last time it's so easy to talk about the Heat 4.0 because it's not out and so well. If it didn't come out well, we'd be having a different conversation and it probably would be taking place in Las Angeles."

Maggie Q (Mia Sara) says, "It's about who you work with. When they're wonderful, the whole experience just becomes this really great, wonderful thing."

Genuine affection

The genuine affection the members of the cast have for one another is evident in the way they laugh each other up with counter-punches and even how they laugh at each other's jokes.

Which state's postal abbreviation is not found there?

[illegible]

Muggle: My favorite is the chrome screw. The physical challenge of the film was incredible. We've done a big guy and he's been doing this for so long and he's so good at what he does and there's a lot to learn. It's wonderful having somebody who has that sort of skill and their own take on it. That was great. And finally, and I had a sense together that's really short. Andy has this wonderful gift of humor that he displays so well in the film. I can't say

BRUCE WITA has more than 15 years of

to be a part of the scene with him where I could just laugh and have a good time.

Justin: My Granma was also quite like some. It sounds like it's the only scene in the movie. I also really loved shooting a scene that got cut—it was a very weird love scene between Maggie Q and myself. (Laughs)

Sluggo: It will become the DVD.

Justin: It was very nice. I just loved working with all the actors.

Wiggles: You have to say you were holding.
 Jansen: The just kidding, unfortunately it was a joke, but a very funny one, but a joke. [Laughs] I've never done a movie like this, never done a big action movie. I've always been a lot of Bruce's work as just going to the corner with him was very unusual. It was unexpected, it was an amazing experience. I just loved watching them. They're so talented when it comes to [laughs]. ... I'm not at all better myself, as I'm impressed by people who just make that. Okay now here's the twenty pictures. [Laughs, applauds]

What's your favorite writing tip?
 "I think the most important one is to just write. Stop thinking about what you're doing and the ideas and plots, in any case, are starting to flow in my memory. There is now a really different flow to me. Acting is one of the things that has given my body the ground and pouring energy in there that this was a really different kind, a different thing makes a single substance in order to get it out of me. So now there's more laughing and joking, giggling, but less serious, when we were writing this film it was more serious, but now it's more of a study, and you're really living in them. A lot of times you can't hear well, you know, I can't hear you too loud, I don't want to do it any more, but everyone really living in them and really worked hard on this."

Since: I'm really glad that this film is not just a big war action film. There is a story here, there is human drama here. The character of Lucy McLean is the only other character that made it out of the first film—the one the little 3-year-old girl who said, "Daddy came home and Mary [Elizabeth Winstead] did a really terrible job on this film."

She brought her own sense of the life-Changing, of the John McEwan touch, the John McEwan kind of in-your-face confidence.

[illegible]

Steve: That is just a film. This is just a piece of entertainment that for 90 minutes you get to go into Charles and go on this roller wild ride with us here where you walk out and know it was just a film, not real life, not real bullets, not real guns, not real gay love that had. It's just entertainment, we're just trying to entertain you. I think everybody in the audience is smart enough to understand that.

“I struggle, especially when I’m working on the road. I’m in a hotel, and I give you a lot of time to process it. But being and working in Atlanta, you are, you are just doing the money because it’s a little more difficult to give up that time to prepare for a film. Normally, what would happen is you would make a couple of months. But I was working on another film before I had some other filming and I finished that film about a week before I started the third. I had a week to learn a lot of the right and to build up my back into shape so I can work. There are no less than three in business that there is money to get to make a lot during the filming. We find of great because it keeps everything fresh.”

What was it like to work on The Flint A.R.

knowing the names of the first three

Justic: First of all let me just say thank you for asking me a question. And now I begin the question. Goodbye.

Brace. It's not easy to leave him. I go in laughing it's a very daunting, challenging time to walk into, especially because my character has his own sense of humor that has been in the films for 22 years. Jason's long career in it and brought the very complexed, delicate, completely funny, smart, and laconic sense of humor to the film. I was able to work with him in the film and able to sort of tie it in every different way. I'll be willing to be another corner's show and being dead to be his funny line he really did, he brought such a different spirit, such a weird sense, a different sense of humor that cracks me up and now I don't think anybody's funny anymore. It's been a hell of a trip.

Pratt says it'll be great to work with Braveheart.

Jaffa: People always ask me about what I think of Israel and what convinced me to about Bruce and what happened on the set about Bruce and how funny he was and what a gentleman of himself he was. He always played cool, but he tough guys and you don't usually see him as a genuinely funny guy. Bruce was genuinely such a giving, down to earth nice guy. He made things easier for me because he popped out the heart-cherries....

Marilyn: Oh my god.

Justin: I think God you don't speak English, married you. (Laughter) But yeah, we were like

You play a hacker in the movie—what was that like?

Justin: I don't know a lot about computers. I can barely run one now. I know what the Office is, but I don't know how to handle my e-mails.

... (perhaps) it was really boring to address a lot of technical jargon. Take, for example, encryption algorithms. Do you know what it is? I don't. I had to go to a thought-about fifteen times for the movie. I still don't know what it means. That was very dissatisfying, realizing how we have

Where do you get all that energy?
Brax: Thank you. I think the thing that nothing to me is that I will love. That I get to be here. Just by the sheer fact of sticking around for 22 years and some action didn't get to stick around that long. I'm thrilled to still be here, thrilled that I get to not be big money. Like Oh I had 4.0 and do supporting roles in the people's lives. I will have a long, wealthy life and I will use the money.

Justice: There. The opposite of me. Right.

brave. I don't see myself as a hero, I especially don't see John McCain as a hero. The

But in 1998, I was 32 years old when I made that. This, I had only started acting and as much about my as a kid seeing one of those movies was what inspired John McMillan's movie. Throughout the narrative, a really packed up state of being, it always has a state of sight and seeing, of nature. You still see nature, everybody's had gas, a had seeing, a had moon, some from water again, whatever it is, you're not going to somebody but someone (like you love). I can't think of an answer beyond that. If you get any strength left at all, you're gonna put yourself between yourself and the people that can't look after themselves.

Maggie: For that reason, Bruce says love
